A WALKING GALLOWS

The Horrible Deeds of Lieutenant Hepenstall.

This Handsome but Brutal Glant of the Wicklow Militia Was the Most Cold Blooded and Eccentric Executioner That Has Ever Existed.

Among the examples and records of British tyranny during the terrible year 1798 there is none more extraordinary, according to a writer in an English magazine, than that of Lieutenant Edward Hepenstall, known by the nickname of "the walking gallows," for such be certainly was, literally and practically. This notorious individual, who had been brought up as an apothecary in Dublin, obtained a commission in the Wicklow militia, in which he attaiged to the rank of lieutenant in 1795. He was a man of splendid physique, about six feet two inches in height and Strong and broad in proportion. Referring to this handsome but brutal giant, Sir Jonah Barrington in his memoirs

"I knew him well and from his countenance should never have suspected him of cruelty, but so cold blooded and eccentric an executioner of the human race never yet existed." At the outbreak of the sangulary rebellion, when the common law was suspended and the stern martial variety flourished in its stead, Lieutenant Hepenstall hit upon the expedient of banging on his own back persons whose physiognomies he considered characteristic of seditious tenets. At the present day the story seems almost incredible, but it is a notorious fact, revealed by the journalism of the period, that when rebels, either suspected or caught red handed, were brought before him Hepenstall would order the cord of a drum to be taken off and then, rigging up a running noose, would proceed to hang each in turn across his athletic shoulders until the victims had been slowly strangled to death, after which he would throw down his load and take up another.

The "walking gallows" was clearly both a new and simple plan and a mode of execution not nearly so tedious or painful as a Tyburn or Old Bailey hanging. It answered his majesty's service as well as two posts and a crowbar. When a rope was not at band Hepenstall's own silk cravat, being softer than an ordinary balter, became a merciful substitute. In pursuance of these benevolent intentions the lieutenant would frequently administer an annesthetic to his trembling victim-in other words, he would first knock him silly with a blow. His garters then did the duty as handenffs, and the cravat would be slipped over the condemned man's Whenever he had an unusually powerful victim to do with, Hepenstall took a pride in showing his own strength. With a dexterous lunge of his body the lieutenant used to draw up the poor devil's head as high as his own and then, when both were cheek by jowl, begin to trot about with his burden like a joiting cart horse until the rebel had no further solicitude about sublunary affairs. It was after one of these tretting executions, which had taken place in the barrack yard adjoining Stephen's green, that Hep-pensiall acquired the surname of "the walking gallows." He was invested with it by the gallery of Crow Street theater, Dublin.

At the trial of a rebel in that city the lieutenant, undergoing cross examination, admitted the aforementioned details of his method of hanging, and Lord Norbury, the presiding judge, warmly complimented him on his loyalty and assured him that he had been gullty of no net which was not natural to a zealous, loyal and efficient officer, Lieutenant Repensiall, however, did not long survive his hideous practice He died in 1804. Owing to the odlura in which he was universally held, the authorities arranged that his funeral should take place secretly, while a Dublin wit suggested that his tomistone would be sultably inscribed by the following epitaph:

Here he the bones of Heperstall, Judge, jury, gallows, rope and all-
